

Act LXXVII of 1993 on the Rights of National and Ethnic Minorities

(Entry in force: 25 November 2005)

The National Assembly,

- keeping up with the most noble traditions and values of Hungarian history;
- in the spirit of its commitment to the notions of democracy and humanism;
- with the intention of promoting friendly co-operation and understanding between peoples and nations;
- conscious of the fact that the peaceful co-existence of national and ethnic minorities with the majority nation is a component of international security, declares that it regards the right to national and ethnic identity as a universal human right, and the special individual and collective rights of national and ethnic minorities as fundamental freedoms that it will respect and enforce in the Republic of Hungary.

In their entirety these rights are neither a gift from the majority nor the privilege of the minority, nor is their basis the numerical proportion of the national and ethnic minorities within the majority nation, but the right to be different, which is based on the respect for the freedom of the individual and for social harmony.

In its concept of equality and solidarity as well as the principles of the active protection of minorities, the National Assembly is guided by respect for minorities, esteem for moral and historical values, and the consistent representation of the shared vital interests of the minorities and the Hungarian nation within the framework of recognised universal moral and legal norms.

The mother tongue, the intellectual and material culture, the historical traditions of the national and ethnic minorities who are Hungarian citizens and live in Hungary, as well as other characteristic qualities which stem from their minority status are parts of their individual and collective identity.

All these elements are special values, the preservation, the cultivation and the enrichment of which is not only a basic right of the national and ethnic minorities, but also the interest of the Hungarian nation, and ultimately that of the community of states and nations.

Considering the fact that self-governments form the basis of democratic systems, the establishment of minority self-governments, their operation and the resulting cultural autonomy is regarded by the National Assembly as one of the fundamental preconditions of the special enforcement of the rights of minorities.

In view of the historical co-existence of the Hungarian majority with national and ethnic minorities, the National Assembly guarantees, also through this Act, all the rights which are not only the human rights of members of minorities as Hungarian citizens and their communities; but also political rights that enable them to promote the preservation of their national or ethnic identities. The aim of this Act is to establish the institutional basis necessary to ensure that citizens can lead the lives of members of national or ethnic minorities as laid down in the Final Act of the Helsinki Conference on Co-operation and Security in Europe in 1975, including the freedom to maintain living and free contacts with the kin state and the mother nation. In preparing this Act, the National Assembly of the Republic of Hungary is guided by the vision of the establishment of a Europe without frontiers, the reduction and the elimination of the disadvantages which result from a minority status, and the development of the democratic institutional structures necessary to achieve these goals.

While observing the provisions of international law and the principles laid down in the Constitution of the Republic of Hungary, and in the interest of achieving these objectives, the National Assembly has adopted the following Act to record the due rights of persons and their communities belonging to national and ethnic minorities so as to ensure the enforcement of these rights and to regulate the means of enforcement:
